prove that he did not wilfully neglect his duty, for there was in the Court-House corridor a whole platoen of patrolmen in full uniform from the Eldridge street station, come to testify as to what was done under the Captain's orders, towards conrying out the instructions of Supt. Byrnes, conveyed through Inspector Williams, to suppress the places complained of in Dr. Parkhurst's famous letter, the British steamship Marcea, Capt. Tate, from Dundee, Scotiand, March 15, which arrived to-day, had a tempestuous

The Superintendent related how he sent for Capi. Devery after the receipt of the Parkhurst letter last August, and instructed him to make a thorough and determined effort to get the facts, report to him twice a week in writing and arrest every violator of the law found in the places specified by Dd. Parkhurst as disorderly or gambling houses.

found in the places specified by Dal Parkhurst as disorderly or gambling houses.

Col. James also elicited that after the second leter of Dr. Parkhurst the Super-intendent detailed Detective Sergis, Jacobs and Reap, of his Headquarters sinff, to make an independent and secret inquiry into the character of these places and report to him every marning, their work to be done between 6 o'clock at night and 6 o'clock in the morning.

Justice O'Brien excluded these reports from the case, however, as not bearing on the question of Capt. Devery's neglect of duty. The reports were marked for identification, however, and will be used by the defense when Jacobs and Reap are called to the stand to testify as to their discoveries in the Eldridge street precinct, when they were sent to find out for Supt. Byrnes whether Capt. Devery was performing his duty or not.

Supt. Byrnes testified that Capt. Deverey's record as a policeman had always been good, that he had been obedient to his superiors, and no charge of neglect of duty had ever before been preferred against him.

Arthur F. Dennett who rooms at 279 Greenwich street, an agent of the Parkhurst Lay. November, supplanted Supt. Byrnes in the witness chair.

The rest of Dennet's story was appalling as a revelation of the abandoning of women of the class found in these east side dives. Young Mr. Dennett of the class found in these east side dives. Young Mr. Dennett of the class found in these east side dives. Young Mr. Dennett stand much hyperbole. His testimenty left no doubt of the character of the house on Nov. 23, 1893, anyway.

Under cross-examination, Dennett said he was twenty-aseven years old, born in Concord, N. H., and had been in New York some years, He worked eighteen months for Watson, the printer in Murray street, and had worked there every Winter since. Six years ago he bought a half interest in the Aqueloktan Hotel in New Hampshire, a Summer hotel. He keeps a general store there in the season also.

Col. James exclaimed joyously, when young Mr. Dennett said that he had put out some little side lines, and was at one time last October a Columbian Guard at the Chicago Fair.

"Wa-are your" exclaimed the Colonel. In When was that?"

Dennett said he became a detective for last October.

"Twas a Self-Accusing Report.

"I ask you," began Mr. Weeks, "If Capt. Devery made any report to you be tween Aug. 10 and Nov. 25, 1830, as to the character of the house at SI Ekiridge street?"

Supt. Byrnes said he did, and by request of Mr. Weeks produced the one dated Sept. 23. That was the date of one of the visits of three Parkhurst agents to the place, when the performances there were of the most abandoned order and ingress to the house was as assay as to a valoon or theatre.

The report grated that the Captain had investigated, as directed by the Superintendent, and had found it Eldridge street, and some twenty-five other houses, their occupants and the class of Lusiness, their occupants and the class of Lusiness and the precinct. OAKLAND, Cal., April 6.—The city of takland has had many exciting events in its history, but nothing has occurred here to compare with the turmoil caused early this morning by a regiment of un mployed men which left San Francisc Wednesday to join Coxey's army on its journey to Washington. All night every man, woman and child in Oakland was on the streets, the riot alarm was ounded, the Governor was asked to call out the National Guards, extra polic and deputy sheriffs were sworn in an irmed with rifles and preparations made for fighting of the bloodlest kind, because 540 unemployed, desperate men refuse or San Francisco, for assistance in going across the bay to Oakland, where, however, they expected to secure transportation on freight trains to the East. The Mayor contributed $25, and the regiment was sent over to Oakland. Mayor Pardee, of this city, resented what he called the foisting of San Francisco's unemployed upon Oakland, and a tart correspondence ensued between the Mayors of the two cities. Upon arriving at Oakland, the army found that the Southern Pacific Railroad wouldn't allow the soldiers to fide on their trains, so they camped in the Mills Tabernacle and waited. The people of akland fed them, and they were in no hurry to move.

The citizens raised $250 to pay the fare of the Industrials to Sacramento, and arrangements were made to have them start at 5 o'clock last night. The army marched to the Sixteenth street station to take the train, and the people of Oakland heaved a sigh of relief in getting rid of them so easily. When, however, the army found that it was to be transported in box cars the men rebelled, and refused to leave unless passenger conches were provided, so the army marched back to the tabernacle.

At 11 o'clock Mayor Pardee Issued positive instructions to Chief of Police Schaefer that the Industrial army must be driven out of the city by force. The Chief made a secret investigation and learned that the army consisted of about $40 men. He then bissued a general
